2. (1) 【答案】F

【解析】 As a human being, one can hardly do anything without a friend, for life without friends will be a lonely journey in the dark sea or one in the desert. Truly, a friend gives out light and warmth like a lamp. For this reason. I have always felt it a lucky time if a friend comes to me in my sadness, cheers me up in my low spirits, or shares my happiness with me. It is wonderful, too, to feel that someone is standing by me and ready to provide help and encouragement during my growth.

A real friend is considered even more precious than a priceless pearl or an expensive house. The old saying "A friend in need is a friend indeed" has told us what true friends mean.

Still, it is natural that different people have different ideas in making friends. Some think it important to make friends with whom they may share the same interests or hobbies with. Others are going to find friends so as to get some favors or special help. And I am one of those who think very little of similarity or position or power. As long as a person is warm-hearted, selfless, honest, open-minded, but not cruel, cold, shortsighted nor narrow minded, I am willing to make friends with him or her, giving my support and help which remain unchanged to him or her all my life.
